PRE-TREATMENT RECOVERY HOUSING PROGRAM

Addressing the gap between detox and treatment

An increasing number of men and women, who are serious about their recovery and in need of a safe place to stay during their wait time before their treatment date, contact us from detox centres. The Pre-Treatment Housing Program was developed to address this gap for men and women who are concerned about their continued sobriety between detox and treatment.

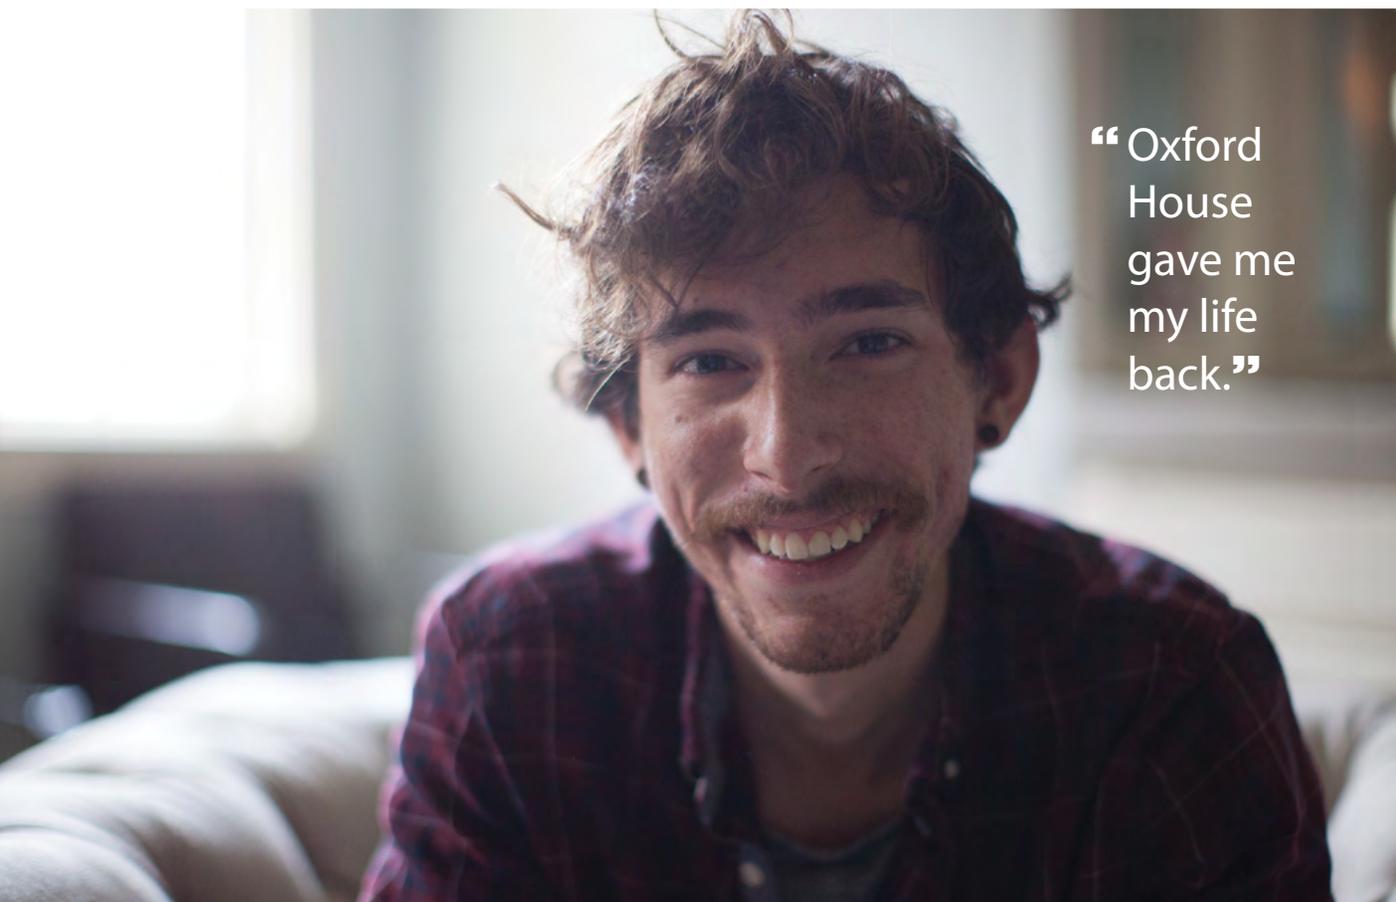

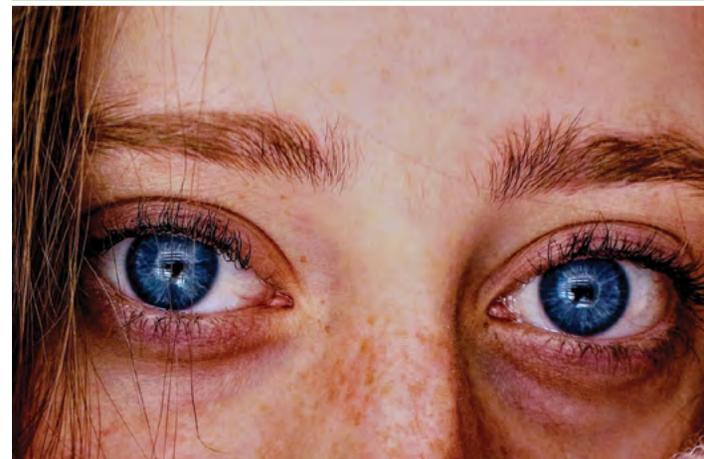

Oxford House Foundation knows that it is crucial to have a stable continuum from the moment an individual decides to become sober all the way through to treatment and after with all safe guards in place. The period for people waiting to get into treatment is one of the most stressful periods for a person making the decision to become sober.

One of the main concerns today is the crisis we are facing with opioid addiction and the need to get people the help they are seeking quickly, safely and in the most efficient and effective way possible.

Our Pre-Treatment Recovery Housing Program will target the period in which an individual has to wait prior to being accepted into treatment.

“Oxford House gave me my life back.”
